A circuit of the polling places shows that voting has been active, so much so that already over half, and in some precipical three fourths of the hallets. precincts three-fourths of the ballots are already in the boxes. The repub-licans claim that the fine weather works to their advantage, but the democrate do not concede this. Both parties are doing their utmost, and the vote is likely to be larger than ever before. There has been no trouble, and the best of seeling seems to prevail. The democrats claim to have evidence that two illegal votes have been cast by republicans in one
